

Call for Communications Manager

The European Association for Digital Humanities (EADH) seeks applicants for the role of Communications Manager.

Working together with our Executive Committee, the Communications Manager will write news releases, maintain EADH's website, update its slider with new project descriptions, and disseminate news through our social media channels. The person fulfilling this role should anticipate spending approximately 2-3 hours per week on the position. The role comes with a small annual stipend of €2,000, paid in quarterly instalments. The role is well suited for those who wish to develop deeper knowledge of digital humanities in Europe and gain professional experience in social media and communications.

Desired skills include:

- attention to detail
- some knowledge of digital humanities communities in Europe
- excellent written communication skills in English and in a second European language
- experience creating and publishing content (Drupal or WordPress)
- experience with social media platforms
- skills in graphic design (Photoshop, GIMP)

To apply, submit a CV or résumé and a short cover letter describing your interest in, and qualifications for, the position to Zoe Screti, the Secretary of EADH (secretary@eadh.org).

The application deadline is 28 February 2025.